AAMCO expands with opening of West Coast Franchise Support Center in San Diego

Iconic Automotive Brand Plans Adding Staff to Support Western Division Franchisees

AAMCO Transmissions & Total Car Care announced today that it is expanding its support operations with the opening of a new 3,100 sq. ft. support center located in the Kearney Mesa section of San Diego at Sky Park Court. The center will house up to eleven support staff members who will service franchisees in the company's Western Division.

"The opening of the West Coast Franchise Support Center shows our dedication to provide all of our customers – our franchisees – with the level of support and service that we demand they provide for ALL AAMCO customers," said AAMCO President and CEO, Marc Graham.

According to Graham, the expansion also reflects the growth that the chain is experiencing despite the recent economic climate. "AAMCO is a brand that has been through economic booms and busts during our 50-year history and we continue to thrive. The reason for this is our heritage as the experts in transmissions, the most complicated system in the vehicle for over 50 years, and how that translates to our ability to diagnose and treat all automotive service needs," added Graham.

ABOUT AAMCO

The AAMCO brand has approximately 900 automotive centers throughout the United States, Canada and Puerto Rico. Established in 1962, AAMCO centers are proud to have served more than 35 million drivers. Today, under the leadership of CEO and President Marc Graham, AAMCO is extending its well-known brand and Double A (beep beep) M-C-O signature from transmission service and repair to being a lifetime auto service provider by offering an unprecedented level of expertise and trust.
